

Philippines has been known worldwide because ( ) Filipino people was able to gain their independence in spite of big number of colonization which occurred during the past world wars. We once became under the government of Spaniards, British, Japanese and Americans. During those times, some people were nationalistics. They fought for their rights and did not allowed those foreigners to lead our country. One of them was Jose Rizal. It is best to build the statue of Jose Rizal.

First, It would serve as a remembrance for the good life that he lived. For example, Filipinos are knowledgeable about Rizal's life and works. If they would always see his image, people would always reminds about him. Rizal did a lot of great things for his family, loved ones and for his country. He traveled and lived worldwide. He imparted his wisdom to Filipino. He was a great help for everyone.

Second, It would inspire people to be like him. For instance, our young people would looked on him as their hero. They understand the good deeds that Rizal had for the Filipinos. Those would be an inspiration for everyone especially for our youth. They would surely admire Jose Rizal and would be their role model.

And finally, It would remind people of his ideals. I remember, my friend's hometown has Rizal's monument or their town plaza. When my friend was still young, he used to play near the monument. When he is grown up, he became nationalistic. He always think first for the betterness of the people in his community than himself.

In conclusion, let me reiterate that, It is best to build a statue of Jose Rizal because It would serve as a remembrance for the good life that he lived, It would inspire people to be like him and It would remind people of his ideals. (35 minutes)
